Artist Statement

Suzie Elizabeth Hunt (b.1996) is a contemporary fine artist living and working the West Midlands. Having completed her degree at Birmingham School of Art, she gained a keen interest in the Urban, having been a constant witness to Birmingham's everchanging landscape. Fascinated with how the physical presence of our urban environment and its components alters our perception of the everyday, she seeks to understand it through order, technology and systems.

By documenting, she decontextualizes, then reconstructs her surrounding space. This allows her to separate the work from the constant influx of information, and process it into a readable format; leaving her work open to inexhaustible invitations of deduction and speculation. Left mute, the caption or title takes on the role of the missing voice.

Through the fabrication of work, be that in the form of data, documentation, print, projection or installation, she establishes a connection; building a collection and finding order. By altering these everyday recordings, she questions the attitudes and unwritten rules that have formed in these environments; their structures/materials and our behaviour towards them, how narratives are constructed. She reframes the original, inviting visitors to engage from a new perspective; changing their understanding of what surrounds them and how they navigate it.
